Giovanni "John" Parone
June 1, 1882 - May 23, 1967

Giovanni Parone, known to many as John, passed away peacefully on May 23, 1967, in Philadelphia at the age of 84. His remarkable life journey spanned two continents and embodied the immigrant experience that helped build America.

Born in Tivoli, Italy, Giovanni's early years were marked by both adventure and hardship. As a young man of 12, he traveled to Brazil with his family, experiencing life in Rio de Janeiro and São Paulo before returning to Italy. After serving honorably in the Italian Army's 490th Infantry Regiment from 1904 to 1906, Giovanni made the pivotal decision to seek his fortune in America.

In November 1906, the 24-year-old Giovanni arrived at Ellis Island aboard the S.S. Sicilian Prince, carrying little more than hope and determination. He settled in Philadelphia, where his uncle Antonio Lattanzio helped him establish roots in the close-knit Italian-American community.

Giovanni's dedication to both family and country defined his American years. In 1913, he returned to Italy to marry Irena Pernie in his hometown of Tivoli before bringing his bride back to Philadelphia. Together, they welcomed three children: Sarah Irene, Anthony John, and Caroline. Tragedy struck in 1918 when Irena passed away during the influenza pandemic, leaving Giovanni to raise their young children as a single father.

A man of strong work ethic, Giovanni labored as a longshoreman for the Cunard Line and later as a skilled boilermaker, primarily with the Cochrane Corporation. His commitment to his adopted homeland was formalized when he became a U.S. citizen in 1937, a achievement he cherished deeply.

In his later years, Giovanni enjoyed a well-deserved retirement, spending time at his daughter Sarah's chicken farm in New Jersey and even taking a memorable trip to Europe in 1950.

Giovanni is survived by his three children, their families, and a legacy of resilience, hard work, and devotion to family that will inspire generations to come. He will be laid to rest at Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, leaving behind a story of courage and the enduring American dream fulfilled.

After serving honorably in the Italian Army's 490th Infantry Regiment from 1904 to 1906, Giovanni made the pivotal decision to seek his fortune in North America.

In November 1906, the 24-year-old Giovanni arrived at Ellis Island aboard the S.S. Sicilian Prince, carrying little more than hope and determination. He settled in Philadelphia, where his uncle Antonio Lattanzio helped him establish roots in the close-knit Italian-American community.

In his later years, Giovanni enjoyed a well-deserved retirement at his daughter Sarah's farm in New Jersey, where he cultivated grapes and became renowned for his exceptional homemade Muskatel wine—a craft that brought him great joy and connected him to his Italian heritage. He even took a memorable trip back to Europe in 1950.

Giovanni is survived by his three children, their families, and a legacy of resilience, hard work, and devotion to family that will inspire generations to come. He will be laid to rest at Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, leaving behind a story of courage and the enduring American dream fulfilled across three continents.
